

Rockwell Kent (American 1882-1971) End of the World Series: Degravitation, lithograph, 1937

The prints of Rockwell Kent excel in craftsmanship. His years of work as an architectural draftsman and carpenter provided him with the skills necessary to draw accurately. Lunar Disintegration or End of the World series, as titled by Kent, shows his concern for our planet long before ecology was on the minds of the general population.